

Short presentation

My research is broadly concerned with the development of statistically valid inference methods when using data-adaptive estimation in a longitudinal survival data setting. In particular, I work with targeted learning for survival data, cross-validation with censored data, convergence rates for empirical risk minimizers of censored data loss functions. I am also interested in applied projects and have worked with genetics data and large registry data.